

Spotlight on Cabo San Lucas

San Jose del Cabo. At the bargaining table, Americans conceded they didn't need any more desert than they already had. Baja was thus left to the Mexicans.

Today, Cabo San Lucas is unspoiled and is one of the world's best fishing areas. It remains Los Cabos' primary tourist attraction with beautiful white sand beaches, great shopping and a large American retiree population. Last year 550,000 visitors arrived by air, car and cruise ships.

HISTORY

For centuries the Baja peninsula was an isolated area inhabited by Cochimi Indians. In the 16th century, lured by rumors of Aztec gold, the Spanish explorer Hernan Cortez sent ships to explore the area.

The first ships landed at what is now La Paz, where many crew members were slain by the Cochimis. Though the survivors found no gold, they did discover a bounty in pearls.

Aside from the pearl trade, the Baja Peninsula held no wealth for the Spaniards. In the 17th century, the Jesuits arrived and founded the first mission at Loreto in 1697. In all, 30 missions were founded by Jesuits and later by Franciscans and Dominicans. By the 1850s, as disease depopulated the peninsula, all were abandoned.

In 1834, United States President James K. Polk sided with Texans who were tired of paying taxes to Mexican generals. Troops marched on La Paz and

HOW TO GET TO TOWN

The town is located approximately four blocks from the pier. Walk to the right from the landing pier. The town is a leisurely 15-minute walk along the marina's edge. If your time is limited, it is suggested that you take a taxi to town. Any location in town is about $3 per person. Ask to be dropped at Diamonds International.

SHOPPING

Mexico boasts some of the world's finest arts and crafts, sterling silver jewelry and leather in the world. Our recommended stores in Cabo San Lucas offer this town's finest selection. Adorn yourself in chains, bracelets and rings or load up on soft, fine leather hand bags, luggage and other accessories. Don't miss the opportunity to capture a reminiscence of Mexico and her people. Take home some of the various Mexican crafts in the form of an original ceramic, colorful painting or pre-Columbian replica, or opt for a Mexican embroidered cotton dress or blouse.
